In his new show, FIL descends from the mountain he's been living on since his ninth birthday (that's a metaphorical mountain, like The Magic Mountain, actually a real mountain, so it's more like a mountain of debt, which should actually be called a pit of debt, right?). FIL's spent the past few decades concentrating on not making too big of a deal out of his grandeur. He became a comedian. He was happy because he was able to live out his two great talents: modesty and genius. And now, a new show once again. Just like every year by the way. Different from last year. Every year at Christmas, Wladimir Kaminer and his family gather in the Volksbühne cafeteria. There's Christmas goose with dumplings, red and green cabbage. Afterwards he takes to the stage and tells his stories -- this year it'll be for the 10th time. Followed by a Russendisko party in the Roter Salon until the early morning hours.
